

SYNOPSIS

Lamas and Alpacas - Therapists in Woollen Pullovers

Lamas und Alpakas - Therapeuten im Wollpullover

With their brown googly eyes, wispy coat and gentle manner, llamas and their close relatives, alpacas, are animals that touch the soul. As such, a number of social institutions have been using the animals in recent years in therapy, particularly for disturbed children, victims of abuse or people with psychological problems. This documentary shows llamas and alpacas in their less prominent role as therapeutic animals and the rebranding of their image - from sources of wool and pack animals for trekking to animals of healing.
