

SYNOPSIS

My Heart, My Soul - My Horses

Pferde, meine Seele

For thousands of years, mankind has been fascinated by horses. What is it that ties us so closely to these animals? Can that extraordinary relationship be explained somehow?

In this documentary, various people present their own stories as well as their horses. You will meet Jean Francois Pignon, the renowned French Master of freestyle dressage as well as the 80-year old lady who still masters the highest art of riding. Two young girls, who share a family-like relationship with their horses are portrayed as well as a Viennese Fiaker, who cannot live without his animals. Even when dealing with death, man turns to horses: A pastor, who brings together mortally ill children with horses is shown as well as a former tournament amazone who now runs a stud for horses that otherwise would be put down.

No single story of the documentary can answer the above question all by itself. It is the variety of experiences portrayed in the piece that provides for an attempt to solve the mystery that surrounds the complex relations between mankind and horses.
